18 Acres Acquired For School

The Selectmen acquired an estimated 18 acres of land this week in West Andover to allow for a 24-room expansion of the elementary school on Beacon Street. The takings were effected on Monday.

The board paid $25,500 for the largest tract, the so-called Carter-Haartz land which includes 17 acres. The open area is assessed for just $300 an acre, but the land was appraised $1500 an acre just prior to the taking and the board used this figure in making its award. Access to this portion of the expanded school site will be from High Plain Road.

The board also acquired three-quarters of an acre of land (the DeLuca property) which fronts on Beacon Street for $3800. This property is assessed for $3100.

Town Manager Richard Bowen said after the takings that the town now has legal possession of the properties and can proceed with engineering studies, which are to

Dormitory Decorating

ABC: A Mid-Year Report

(A TOWNSMAN Feature)

What use is ABC?

What possible good can it do to uproot a handful of boys to give them an educational opportunity when thousands of bright youngsters must stay behind in disadvantaged neighborhoods to be blighted by academic neglect?

Isn't it tokenism? Isn't Andover salving its white, upper middle class conscience by accepting a program that brings in young men of tested potential when it could make a more direct attack on urban education problems with a project that would involve young people from closer home?

There are people in Andover who continue to raise these questions when there is discussion of the A Better Chance experiment at Andover High School, but they are not people who have had direct contact with the 10 boys brought here four months ago as the second group of ABC students to be placed in a public school. The first group pioneered at Hanover, N. H. in 1966 and is re-enrolled there this year.

No one who is closely involved with ABC has any illusions about what can be accomplished with a program for 10, but the teachers, project officials and host families watch the achievements of boys who are now more to them than names and contend that progress for 10 is better than no progress at all.

In the first grading period of the term, the collective marks of the ABC boys averaged out to C, a record that has impressed Principal Philip Wormwood who is in a position to relate potential to the previous educational and environmental background of each student. Out of a total of 42 class marks, the boys brought home just six D's, an indication that they are catching up at a healthy rate. For some, this is not an easy matter. One boy, for example, is a native of Prince Edward County, Virginia where public schools were closed for four years because of disputes over Federal desegregation laws. During this period, he attended classes taught by volunteers and lay people. As Principal Wormwood puts it: "He lost four years out of his life."

There are teachers at the high school who believe ABC boys work harder than other students to achieve in the classroom. Some disagree, but add that they do be-

Board Asks Subsidy Delay

The terms of the MBTA contract voters agreed to at the last special Town Meeting, with their appropriation of funds, would provide for continuation of the present one-day-a-day service now offered.

This week the board dispatched a telegram to U.S. Senators Edward Kennedy and Edward Brooke asking them to intercede in an effort to delay a federal grant to the MBTA which will enable the transit agency to take over operations of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. on Jan. 1.

Andover officials, along with those from other communities affiliated with the MBTA, want time to find out what effect acquisition of the bus company and its deficits, if any, will have on their municipal obligations to the transit authority. Greater Lawrence communities were among those represented at a Boston meeting Wednesday (too late for TOWNSMAN deadlines) for discussion of the acquisition proposal.

Local Selectmen joined with those from Lawrence, North Andover and Methuen in sending telegrams to Senators Kennedy and Brooke, congressmen from the area and officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development which has authorized the grant.

They were alerted to the possible implications of the bus company acquisition by the Greater Lawrence Chamber of Commerce.

Contract Sessions Suspended

Contract negotiations between bargaining teams representing the Andover School Committee and the Andover Education Assn. were suspended this week and will not be resumed until after the first of January.

When spokesmen for the school board and the AEA failed Monday to reach agreement on a salary schedule for 1968, the School Committee's chief negotiator, Frederick Fitzgerald, suggested that further bargaining sessions be delayed until after the holiday season. Members of the AEA team indicated that they were ready to continue contract talks, but they accepted Fitzgerald's proposal.

The negotiations were stale-mated a week ago when the two teams failed to reach a compromise on salary plans, even though the latest proposal from both the School Committee and the AEA calls for a new bachelor's scale of $6200 to $9400.

Fitzgerald told the AEA this week that he estimates the annual gross cost of its latest salary plan at $164,000. He set the net cost at $88,800 and explained that this figure represents the difference between increments built into the present schedule and the requested increases for the 1968 schedule. Roughly one third of the total cost would have to be accounted for in the coming tax year.

"This is just more than we think is justified," he said.

The AEA's chief negotiator Robert Miner, pointed out that the schedule now recommended by the School Committee is not as costly as one the board was ready to sign earlier in the bargaining. Fitzgerald replied that when the SC was talking a costlier schedule, it was also proposing the suspension of negotiations on all items involving working conditions. He added that his team believes that some of the AEA's proposals on working conditions would lead to budget increases. School Chairman Louis Galbiati participated in the negotiations Monday which were attended by both Supt. Edward L. Erickson and Asst. Supt. Vaughn Clapp.

Fitzgerald made a progress report to the full School Committee on Tuesday and said that the difference between present salary proposals amount to about $30,000 to $40,000.

After some discussion, it was agreed that Fitzgerald should not return to negotiations without having in hand a record of School Committee positions on proposals which have yet to be settled.

Fitzgerald said he intends to ask specific members of the committee to serve with the negotiating team from here on in instead of continuing with the revolving plan used up to now. At this point Committeewoman Virginia H. Cole asked if he would sound out the full committee in advance. Fitzgerald said he felt he had a fairly good idea of the individual opinions of members of the school board, but it was finally agreed that committee positions should be established.

The fact that the contract is unsettled is complicating the School Committee budget procedure. The town manager has asked for firm departmental budgets by Jan. 5 so that the Board of Selectmen and the Finance Committee may wrap up the usual pre-Town Meeting budget reviews in time for completion of the March warrant. Proposals considered at the last two SC - AEA bargaining sessions include the following.

• The AEA has asked and the School Committee has thus far refused to stipulate in the contract that classroom teachers will be involved in the selection of topics for professional in-service training institutes (the so-called curriculum days) and with the preparation of institute programs.

In its proposal, the AEA not only seeks participation but asks that the system's evaluation procedure be among the issues considered at at least one institute in 1968.

The School Committee takes the position that it can negotiate on the subject of evaluation procedures, but that the selection of subject matter for in-service institutes is an administrative policy matter and therefore non negotiable.

Interwoven is controversy over formation of a curriculum council which was among proposals made by a team of educators from Northeast University which evaluated the organization of the Andover school system some months back and recommended measures for strengthening the administrative structure.

Spokesmen for the School Committee said Tuesday that such a council would be formed immediately following appointment of an assistant superintendent of secondary education. When pressed for a deadline, Supt. Edward Erickson replied that he intends to develop a curriculum council after separation of the present junior high school population, even though there are no immediate plans for the hiring of an assistant superintendent.

The AEA countered with the suggestion that Vaughn Clapp, assistant superintendent of elementary education, be named to chair the council which led to a discussion of whether or not Clapp had the time and would be interested in the assignment.

Clapp, who was at the bargaining session, indicated he would be interested only if the council was to be organized for coordination of subject matter from kindergarten through grade 12 instead of from grade seven through 12 as proposed in the Dethy report.

The AEA promptly proposed such coordination.

Representatives of the School Committee indicated that they feel that Supt. Erickson, who presently handles the work that would ultimately be turned over to an assistant in charge of secondary schools, should either head the council himself or name a substitute.

The matter was never resolved. The AEA continued to request linking evaluation and in-service institutes and Frederick Fitzgerald continued to maintain that they should not be tied to one another.

Bruce MacDonald, who spoke for the AEA on this issue, said Andover teachers "feel that they have a problem over evaluation." Referring to evaluation as one of the "paramount concerns" of teachers within the system, he called attention to the fact that though the administration has a program for awarding double salary increments to outstanding teachers, none was awarded last year. He added that in the three of four years since the program was set up, there have been no awards at all to elementary teachers.

The high school teacher said that the AEA believes this fact illustrates a failure in the present evaluation system.

• At a bargaining session on Dec. 12, the AEA tentatively agreed to a School Committee proposal that teachers be allowed 15 days of annual sick leave, accumulative to 150 days and that medical certificates be required for absences exceeding five days.

The AEA asked initially for unlimited accumulation.

• The AEA also agreed tentatively to an SC proposal on personal absence which stipulates that two-days of such leave will be given annually when it is "imperative" and that the superintendent is responsible for equitable administration.

Because requests for personal absence could involve an emergency, the School Committee agreed to a clause that would shorten the grievance procedure when there is disagreement.

The School Committee inserted as a condition that no more than 5% of the teaching staff could ask for and receive permission for personal absence in a single day.

Negotiator Fitzgerald replied when asked why that this was to eliminate the possibility that teachers could effect a work stoppage by requesting personal absence en masse.

• Tentative agreement has been reached on an AEA proposal for five days of professional leave per year to which the School Committee has added the clause that the superintendent can direct teachers to take this leave for purposes that he believes will produce professional improvement. A provision for an accelerated grievance procedure was added at the request of the AEA.

• Agreement was reached on the rights of non-tenure teachers, which gives those refused tenure the right to appear before the School Committee to appeal the SC decision.

People don't plan to fail - they just fail to plan.

Trees Are Holiday Decorating Favorites

The evergreen bough, mistletoe and holly have been used as Christmas decorations and associated with ceremony and curious custom for thousands of years.

Ancient Romans raised an evergreen branch at the December festival of Saturn, their god of agriculture and in Egypt, green date palms were brought indoors to celebrate the winter birthday of the sun.

Long before the Christian era, Teutons and Scandinavians held mistletoe sacred and hung it over doorways as charms. Ancient Druids worshipped mistletoe because it grew on their sacred oak. At the end of every year a Druid priest would cut down the mistletoe with a golden sickle, and not one twig was allowed to touch the earth. The priestly Druids also worshipped the oak and carried a great Yule log to the feast of the winter solstice.

It was Saint Boniface in the 8th Century in Germany who halted the sacrifice of human beings to the oak by commanding his faithful to bring a fir into their homes as a symbol of their new worship.

As pagan ideas gradually vanished, the Christmas tree became a symbol of the season. One of the first written documents about the Christmas tree was in 1605, and Germany was the first country where it became an established custom. According to legend, Martin Luther was the first person to decorate a Christmas tree.

From Germany the custom spread to England to compete with the Yule log and windows gleaming with holly, bay, laurel and rosemary.

The Christmas tree as it is known today was brought to the United States by German immigrants. Guy D. Chichester of Bartlett Tree Experts, who has made a study of holiday customs, reports that Colonial New England had no Christmas celebration because stern Pilgrims considered it a pagan tradition. Even in the southern colonies, the tradition of the Yule log has preceded the Christmas tree.

In some parts of Europe, the first trees used for Christmas decorations were dormant branches of fruit trees. They were brought indoors several weeks before Christmas and forced into bloom by Christmas time. Holly, the subject of many superstitions, was also used because its prickly leaves were thought to represent the Saviour's crown and its red berries representative of drops of blood.

The Faculty Asks

Whom Should Phillips Serve?

(Editor's Note: This is the third of four articles discussing the work of the Phillips Academy steering committee and some of its specific recommendations. The report is of general interest because of Phillips' position as one of the leading independent schools in America. The course of education in such institutions cannot help but have an influence on the course of education in general.)

In the chapter of the Phillips Academy faculty steering committee report entitled, "The Student Body: Whom Should the Academy Serve?", the statement is made, "the Academy can best serve itself and society by seeking a student body diverse in background and varied in abilities and personal qualities and that it has an obligation to provide an opportunity for quality education to some who would otherwise be deprived of it".

In enlarging on its concept of the quality of the student body, the report stresses the Academy's goals of offering a liberal education concerned with "the totality of man-intellectual, physical, emotional, moral and spiritual man". Discussing the admissions policy, the committee points out that there are varieties of excellence in a student body and proceeds to recommend that excellence in areas other than intellectual capacity receive more attention.

"Recognizing the needs of adult society, Phillips Academy should value positive moral qualities as much as intellect. It should value social competence - that is, an interest in others and the ability to work with them - as much as creative imagination and originality of mind. It should recognize that brilliance and common sense, or good judgment, do not necessarily coincide. It should value generosity of spirit and social concern and should seek boys who seem to have the capacity for constructive influence and leadership. It should also value physical hardiness, skill, stamina, and courage; should look for them among its candidates as it looks for other qualities. . . ."

Pointing out that the median IQ of the current Phillips Academy student is 138, according to the tests of the American Council on Education, the committee in the report recommends that the Academy examine the situation of finding itself each year admitting boys of increasing intellectual ability, alluding to the experience of highly selective colleges which

Goodwill Industries Policy Change

The board of directors of Merrimack Valley Industries has announced a change in Goodwill's policy regarding the collection of home appliances.

In a recent statement, the board stated that as of 1968, the Merrimack Valley Industries can no longer accept donations of stoves, dryers or refrigerators. This change follows the current number of Goodwill's donations. The reason for the change, as released by the Merrimack Valley Industries, is that the four articles are too costly for Goodwill to repair and service. The salvage value on the donated items is reported to be less than the cost of Goodwill to pick up and dispose of them.

In commenting on the policy, Robert P. Hoadley, director of the Merrimack Valley Industries, urged area residents to continue their support of Goodwill's program for the handicapped by donating clothing and all other household items. This change affects the collection of the 4 large

Goodwill Has Policy Change

The board of directors of the Merrimack Valley Goodwill Industries has announced a change in Goodwill's policy regarding the home collection of large appliances.

In a recent statement Goodwill's board stated that as of January 1, 1968, The Merrimack Valley Goodwill Industries can no longer accept donations of stoves, washers, dryers or refrigerators. This action follows the course taken by a number of Goodwills across the nation. The reason for this change as released by the Merrimack Valley Goodwill, centers on the fact that the four articles have become too costly for Goodwill to handle, repair and service. In addition the salvage value on the items is reported to be less than it costs Goodwill to pick up and transport them.

In commenting on the change in policy, Robert P. Hogg, executive director of the Merrimack Valley Goodwill Industries, said: "We urge area residents to continue their support of Goodwill's program for the handicapped through the donations of clothing, furniture, and all other household discards. This change affects only the collection of the 4 large appliances.

PHILLIPS

has shown that a community consisting largely of exceptionally able students may not be the happiest or most wholesome environment for the young person's development of the self-respect, confidence and sense of purpose necessary for effectiveness in the affairs of the world."

Turning to the more active recruitment of students from disadvantaged backgrounds, the committee recommends that the Academy "deliberately and vigorously increase its efforts to identify and recruit students from diverse social, economic, cultural, racial, and ethnic backgrounds in order to draw upon the diverse strengths of the nation's population and to maintain a school community which represents and contributes to the openness of our democratic society."

The steering committee also states that the faculty and administration of the Academy "increase its capacity for dealing with disadvantaged minorities by increasing its familiarity with the problems that these boys present" and suggests that ABC and similar summer programs as well as teacher exchanges with public schools in disadvantaged areas offer possibilities which more Academy faculty members could involve themselves in.

Currently, there are 40 boys from disadvantaged backgrounds enrolled at the Academy, 25 of whom participated in one of the summer ABC programs. (A "disadvantaged boy is defined in the report as "coming from a low income family in which neither parent had attended college and from an environment which had not afforded opportunities for education commensurate with the boy's ability".) Collectively, however, over 30% of the student body is receiving financial aid with the average grant of $1500 per year. A total amount of over $336,000 is this year being used for financial aid.

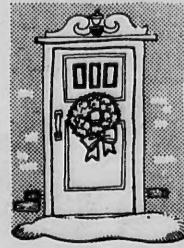

Another point the report makes in recommending increasing the number of these boys is that "our present students should also be the beneficiaries of this policy. Much of a broad liberal education is the result of students' educating each other; in this area a boarding school provides opportunities no day school can match... the intellectual stimulation, the social development, and the moral sensitivity of our present students should be sharpened by associations of young people of different backgrounds".

Commenting on the committee's recommendations for the recruitment of a larger number of disadvantaged boys, Headmaster John M. Kemper said that the admissions committee will consider admitting 15-20 such boys each year. He also said that the newly announced rise in tuition, room, and board to $2,400 a year will result in increasing the scholarship budget by about $10,000 and that scholarship funds will continue to come from the Academy's endowment.

Girl Scouts Will Carol

The Girl Scouts and Brownie Girl Scouts of Andover will sing

By Mary

In the course of human events, fashions in hair styles change, and doubtless there will come a day when you feel the need of a change. But do you know which hair style is suitable for you? How long is your nose? Do your ears stick out? Is your forehead high or low? Here are a few hints about style detailing: Hair pulled straight back shortens a long nose and softens a protuberant one Diagonal parts are generally the most becoming Fluffy up-swept bangs add height to a low forehead When the neck is short, back hair should swish up from the nape For a lovely profile, the bulk of the back hair must be arranged higher or lower than the nose. The stylists at CAPIL HAIR STYLISTS, 2 Riverina Rd., Shawsheen-Andover are expertly trained to style according to an individual's personal characteristics. High Styling . . . Coloring . . . Cutting . . . Shaping. Tel. 475-1639. Open Daily 9-6. Fri. 9-8. Relax in our beautiful salon. Ample Parking. Sale and Service of Hair Pieces.

HELPFUL HINT:

Tire chains shouldn't fit too snugly. Slightly loose chains give better traction and at the same time are less wearing on tires.

Christmas Carols on Friday Dec. 22. It is expected that most of the girls and their leaders will meet in the parking area behind the Junior High School. From there they will go to the Town Hall and sing from the steps.

A short walk will take them to the Housing for the Elderly, where more carols will be sung.

The next stop will be the Town Parking Lot.

Mrs. Richard Young and Mrs. Fred Tarbox will be in charge of the carolling.

To you and yours, season's greetings. Heartily, we wish for you a Christmas that's merry and bright. May Santa . . . and the New Year, too . . . bring you just what you're wishing for!

lieve ABC boys work for a different reason. Said one in interview: "They work to learn instead of for grades."

Says another: "They are just like typical Andover kids. Some days they work and some days they don't."

The staff agrees that the new students have become an integral part of the student body in the weeks since school opened, so much so that one teacher who has ABC boys says he is certain a substitute teacher would never single them out.

A share of the credit for this belongs to the young people of Andover. In Principal Wormwood's opinion, Expressing pride in the attitude of students at the school, Wormwood said they have been able to make the newcomers feel at home without smothering them with attention.

Sports participation has eased the way for a number of the teenagers, eight of whom are Negro. Five are out for basketball, two of them on the varsity team, and four were active in football. Some others are involved with track and added athletic programs.

Coach Dick Collins, who oversees both football and track teams, said this week that one of the boys, Sophomore Van Debose of Dublin, Ga., has turned out to be an outstanding athlete, despite the fact that he has had limited experience

We do not have the Peace on Earth this Christmas that Christ so earnestly beseeched us to pursue. JH Repairs Scheduled

Jack Berberian, the school department's supervisor of general services, told the School Committee at its Tuesday night meeting that some repairs were scheduled at the East Junior High School over the Christmas recess, including laying new floors and installing better lighting in the toilet areas, replacing some fixtures there and painting. Hallway floors are also to be revarnished. He stated that the toilet area repairs will fit in with planned major repairs, and will not have to be torn out or redone when these are ordered.

Berberian, who has been asked to obtain cost estimates for the major repairs needed in the building, said he has flooring and roofing estimates in the works, but none yet on heating and wiring. He said it is difficult to get free estimates. As a result, he was authorized to pay up to $50 for estimates for flooring, heating and ventilation, roof and wiring.

with sports in his hometown school. "He took to football like a duck takes to water," Collins commented.

"Athletics is one area where a boy's worth is going to be demonstrated very soon," Collins added in expressing the view that team sports break down many a barrier. "When you get down there in the mud," he said, "you don't look at a boy's color."

Collins said that from the start he sensed some timidity on the part of ABC students, an effort "to keep a tight rein on tempers even when a little temper would be normal." But they are loosening up tremendously, he said last week. How does he know? He saw one of them trip a teammate up in fun recently, and as a man who knows boys, he regards such familiarity as a good sign.

But Collins and teacher Bruce MacDonald report that they can observe already that having the ABC contingent at Andover High "has advantages for our kids." "It has done them good to realize that these kids are not only just as good as they are, but sometimes better in certain areas," Collins explains. MacDonald added to this view with the remark that associating with the ABC boys is "helping Andover teenagers to realize some of the opportunities they take for granted" and he listed particularly home life, material possessions and school advantages.

"These boys are making them ask a lot of questions about themselves," in the view of another staff member.

Speaking out in a group interview, Teacher Richard Collins pursued this thought with the statement that "There is no question we are gaining as much as they (the ABC boys) are. We're not giving these kids something for nothing. We're just giving them an opportunity."

Andover students and the faculty learned at a Thanksgiving assembly a few weeks ago how it looks from the other side of the coin.

Two ABC boys were on the program and one of them, Larry Osborne, described his impressions of this community. Beginning with the explanation that his attitudes are colored by experiences he has had as a resident of both West Virginia and Chicago, Ill., young Osborne commented: "The first thing I noticed about Andover compared to a large city was the fact that the people do not represent a cross section of the many classes of society such as one finds in Chicago. It seemed to me that there were no representatives of the real laboring class."

Larry went on to say he realizes now that the cost of living in a town like Andover automatically eliminates people of the lowest income group.

He added the opinion that "In a society composed of one class of people there tends to be a repetition of ideas and very little tendency to change." "I believe," he continued, "that a real problem for people living in this type of society where so much is so desirable, would be the ability to even recognize the need for changes."

Commenting that the customary dress in Andover would be Sunday best in West Virginia, young Osborne said it seems to him this degree of formality carries over into personalities. "The contrast is so noticeable in the degree of formality and cockiness that it would probably be easy to mistake it as unfriendliness," he explained.

In concluding his impressions, the transfer student remarked: "By now many of us are seeing something that was not so obvious at first - that is the likeness between places and people - and that people especially are not really all that different, whether they live in Chicago, West Virginia or Andover, Mass."

Senior High Is "Beehive"

Town Manager Richard Bowen said Wednesday that the new senior high school building has been "an absolute beehive of activity" since Monday.

It is possible the town will be able to drop plans to farm out some of the work left undone on Dec. 15 when the school was to have been "substantially completed."

After a tour of the building Saturday, Bowen and Building Chairman Robert McIntyre announced that the town would hire crews to bring the quality of clean up in the building to acceptable quality and back-charge the contractor, E. H. Porter Construction Co.

Notices to this effect were dispatched to Porter last week.

Christmas Is for All

*Many times this season of the year
There is a saying falls upon the ear
"Christmas is for children", — but not so.
Christmas is for all who in spirit go
To the Babe in Bethlehem once born;
In many ways we celebrate the morn:
We smell the fragrance of the Christmas trees,
The sound of carols travels on the breeze,
The twinkling of many a colored light
Shining in radiance through the darkest night,*

*The stockings hanging wait for gifts of love
Like those the Magi gave the Baby from above;
The special magic thrill of Christmas Eve
These things are all a part of what we weave
Through yet another year of months and days.
Yes, Christmas is a part of us always;
For when we meet life's problems
From which we cannot run,
Just stop and think, —
"What would Christ have done?"*

Peace On Earth

Christians around the world will celebrate the birth of one of the great teachers of all time on Monday, reflecting upon the simple wisdom of his ancient formula for Peace on Earth.

Those who disassociate themselves even for a moment from the tinsel and feasting are certain to feel remorse, for honest men know in their hearts how infrequently they walk the path prescribed by the man of Nazareth.

The message of Christmas, however, is a message of eternal hope and any who are influenced by the teachings of Christ will experience a resurgence of faith that man can triumph over his baser instincts. They will believe with renewed conviction that everyone must ultimately accept the logic of the Christian concept of brotherhood.

But the world will look the same next December 25 unless holiday convictions produce more than a transitory sense of security. Peace is illusive because of human failure and human failure alone. Consequently it should be abundantly clear that nations and the individuals that populate them must reevaluate their goals and the methods for achieving them.

In a reflective report on his years as dean of admission at Amherst College, Eugene S. Wilson recently admitted that people in the business of evaluating people are constantly frustrated by how little is known about intelligence and learning and the relatively limited effort being made to unravel the mysteries of the mind. "I can't help but wonder," he said, "what would happen if our nation spent the same time, money, thought and energy now devoted to space exploration on human growth and development. Enabling man to land on the moon seems insignificant compared with helping a man to land on his feet."

Dean Wilson is not suggesting that mankind should limit its horizons; he merely suggests that we might do well to reconsider priorities.

Unless the peoples of the world can become preoccupied with the development of individual potential and as cognizant as Christ of individual worth, the kind of peace we talk about at Christmas time will continue to elude us.

Nature's Ways

New England Mistletoe No Inspiration

By Wayne Hanley

It's a good thing that Christmas spirit does not depend upon New England's mistletoe, otherwise the art of kissing might be seriously hampered.

There are many mistletoes on earth and New England could hardly have done worse in that age when mistletoes were distributed. Our mistletoe is the so-called dwarf mistletoe, and we share the little blighter with Newfoundland, Quebec and parts of New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan.

It is doubtful that the Druids would have incorporated mistletoe into their festivals — thus passing it on as a Christian heritage — if they had had as little to work with as dwarf mistletoe. It hardly would have inspired one to dance around an oak tree, all knobby-kneed and goose-pimples beneath a bearskin serape. Certainly it would have made an unsatisfactory wreath crown.

The New England mistletoe grows as the next thing to an invisible plant. It thrives only on spruce and larch trees. Its presence becomes apparent from what it causes, rather than from any visible growth. It causes an abnormal growth in the tops of these trees which is known as "witch's broom". The witch's broom is a broom — like growth of the tree's own wood, and not the mistletoe itself.

Our mistletoe, like all mistletoes everywhere, is a parasitic plant. It has no leaves, and needs none. It draws its nourishment directly from the branch of the host tree. It is a waxy, olive-green growth — leafless and nothing but a segmented stem that seldom reaches more than one inch high.

Despite its truncated appearance, dwarf mistletoe is a flowering plant that produces seed. Its basic method of seed distribution differs from most mistletoes. Most of them produce seeds which are eaten by birds. The seeds pass through the digestive tract and are deposited on branches by roosting birds. Thus, most mistletoes grow only on mature limbs large enough to support birds. The dwarf mistletoe has circumvented such involved distribution. A pressure in its seed capsule shoots the ripe seeds twenty feet into the air. Many drift in the wind as much as sixty feet. The seeds have a sticky coating that causes them to cling to any limb they strike.

The yellowish-green, waxy mistletoe that we think of as the genuine mistletoe actually is the "false mistletoe". False, that is, because while it appears much like the original European mistletoe, it is a different species. The false mistletoe grows in the southern states, as far north as New Jersey. It prefers the hardwood trees as a host. In the southern winter, when the trees are leafless, clumps of false mistletoe retain their leaves and appear like squirrels' nests from a distance.

The false mistletoe of American Christmas fame is less of a parasite than the New England dwarf mistletoe. It is capable of drawing food from the host tree, but apparently it manufactures most of its own food and uses the host only for transportation of water and dissolved minerals. Because of this habit, it has received a scientific name which means "thief tree".

Birders Count 37 Hearty Species

Birders who braved low temperatures and strong northwest winds Saturday to participate in the 21st annual Christmas count for Greater Lawrence found that birds were "indoors", waiting for more auspicious weather. Nevertheless, 22 bird watchers recorded 37 species which was more than they had hoped for.

In North Andover, they discovered that a mockingbird is wintering at the home of George C. Hayes, 29 First St., providing amusement with effective attacks on starlings and herring gulls.

Reports, Reports, Reports

Reports and more reports occupied the School Committee Tuesday night. Reminded that an annual report for inclusion in the Town's annual report, was due at the Town manager's office Jan. 15, Chairman Louis Galbiati ducked the job, remarking that he "might say something he shouldn't," and passed it on to longtime committeeman William Doherty, who volunteered to prepare the report. Galbiati, however, will prepare the School Committee's annual report which goes in the school department's annual report. Meantime, at the other end

What's Your Problem?

Beware Of Cheap Advice

In this column we have sometimes tried to explain the difference between giving advice and counseling. Often troubled people who come to Family Service expect the counselor to tell them exactly how to solve their problems. Sometimes they are quite disappointed that no instant solutions are forthcoming.

When they really think about the situation they will probably remember that they have had lots of advice before, from cousins, in-laws, former classmates and possibly the friendly neighborhood bartender (although current surveys show that few people ask the bartender for any advice, except how to mix a good dry martini). Some of the advice has been quite specific. "Bill is a bum... you should leave him and get a divorce." "Johnny is spoiled... if you were stricter with him his grades would improve." "Your mother-in-law is impossible... just tell her where to get off."

Other advice has been more general. "Just use your common sense." "If you'll just grin and bear it, things will probably work out all right." And then there is always the person who says: "If I were you I would..."

None of this has been very helpful in the past, and it would be even less helpful in the future.

All of the specific advice has probably occurred to the troubled person himself, and for some reason he has not acted on it. All the general advice is not really advice at all, it's a pious thought which may make the advice-giver feel virtuous but does nothing at all for the person in trouble.

Advice is cheap... but it also can be very expensive. Because there is always a good chance that it's the wrong advice for the person to whom it is given, and that it is followed anyhow. In that case the advice giver may be responsible for an ensuing disaster.

A counselor works differently. He helps the person with a problem to see the problem and himself from new angles, to consider, and possibly to discard, any number of possible solutions. When a solution is finally arrived at and acted upon it's the person's own, figured out by himself, adopted by himself, and adapted to his own special situation and therefore accepted by himself. And because of this, it's probably the right one for him. That of course does not mean it's necessarily the right one for the next guy.

New Finish Attacks Oil

A new finish for cotton fabrics that makes them repel such substances as salad dressing, but not water, has been developed by USDA researchers. Usually, when a fabric is treated to repel oily dirt, it also repels water and is impossible to wash properly because it doesn't really get wet.

Now the scientists have found a new chemical treatment. Cottons treated with the finish resist oily soil, such as that on men's shirt collars, as well as staining by meat fats and vegetable oils. But when washing time comes, the treated fabric allows penetration by water and detergent to remove soil and any stains that do get into the fabric.

In their present state of development, the finishes can be used only on colored fabrics, because they make white ones yellow, so further research is necessary. The new finishes have great promise, however, and the scientists hope to combine these chemicals with those used in permanent press cotton, which tend to stain easier than untreated cottons.

Cable TV Hearing

Dr. Edward R. Willett, chairman of the Consumers' Council, has scheduled a public study session on Jan. 4 on the question of public regulation of Cable TV. All parties interested in presenting their position on this matter should file requests to be heard with Dermot P. Shea, executive secretary of the Council on or before 5 p.m., Jan. 3. The study session will take place in Room 436, State House on 10 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 4, 1968.

This study session is being held in accordance with the Resolve of 1967 - Chapter 75 which provides for an investigation and study by the Consumers' Council relating to the establishment of a centrally located television antennae providing individual reception to homeowners by cable. The directive of the General Court also requires a review and investigation of the laws relative to the public regulation of the maintenance of such systems, the rates to be charged, and selection of channels to be carried over such an antennae system. The Council has been further directed to submit its recommendations and drafts of legislation to the General Court when its study is complete.

Postmen Taking Holidays

Postmaster Francis J. Mooney reports that only mail deposited in certain collection boxes will be processed and dispatched on the Mondays of Dec. 25 and Jan. 1.

To accommodate the small number of people who will wish to have postal service on these two holidays, the boxes in front of the Main Post Office and Shawsheen and Ballardvale stations will be collected at 10 a.m. and all mail in them promptly dispatched.

Postal employees are working tirelessly this holiday season to assure delivery of the record volumes of mail handled by the Post Office Department, Mooney said. They have made extra efforts to guarantee delivery to our Armed Forces, not only in Viet Nam but all over the world.

Mooney said postal employees have earned a well-deserved respite from the long and irregular hours that they are working this holiday season.

Through the thoughtfulness of postal patrons last Christmas and New Year's Days, we were in a position to give postal employees the opportunity to spend these two significant holidays with their families and friends, Mooney added. Your cooperation was most appreciated by postal people, many of whom spent their first holidays with their families in years, he said.

Since our experience has shown that virtually no business mail and very little personal mail are deposited on Christmas and New Year's Days, we are annulling certain postal operations on these two holidays to permit the maximum number of employees to relax at home, he continued.

All men are created equal - and endowed by their creator with an insatiable urge to become otherwise.

CHILDREN LEARN about the religious traditions associated with Christmas by participating in a nativity pageant. Robert Sinlayson, Scott James and David Nardone re-enact the role of the Three Kings, left. Regina Fernandes plays the part of the mother of Jesus. (Murray)

Tots Learn Christmas Meaning

Thirty-nine four and five-year-old children learned about the real meaning of Christmas this year at the third annual Christmas School sponsored by a group of Andover churches.

Mrs. Hartland H. Gifford was director for the 1967 program and she was assisted by some 23 helpers from Faith, Andover Baptist, Christ Episcopal, St. Augustine's and South Churches. The school was held from Dec. 11-15 at Faith Church.

Each day the children worshiped together, saw films, talked to clergymen, worked on handcraft projects, shared refreshments and worked on their interpretation of the Christmas story in addition to learning a daily lesson and Bible verse.

This year the youngsters made cloth booklets with Christmas cards put together in such a way as to tell the story of the birth of Christ. Mrs. Gifford explains that lessons taught at the school were related to the child's life in the hope that this would give each one a clearer understanding of the significance of the religious observance.

The children helped to make advent wreaths, manger scenes, angels, churches and decorative wrapping paper.

On the final day, the young pupils presented a play for their mothers and brought gifts for the infant Jesus. These were later given to the Marine Corps Toys for Tots drive.

Mrs. Gifford reports that pictures of the group are available and that orders may be placed by calling her.

Teachers for the school were: Mrs. Caryl Burger, Mrs. Betty Morin, Mrs. Judy Murray and Mrs. Helen Towne. Mrs. Fran Eigenmann was secretary; Mrs. Arlene Bell was in charge of projects; Mrs. Baerbel David was worship leader; Mrs. Fern Johnson was in charge of visual aids; and Mrs. Jan Whitton was play director.

Give A Take-Your-Shoes-Off-Party

A friend of ours gives one of the easiest and most popular parties of the year. It's a take-your shoes-off party and is for her friends to relax during the Christmas rush. She serves the easiest but tastiest foods and lets her guests drop in anytime during a two-hour period.

Turkey Easy is just the casserole for the party. It can be made quickly, early and is economical. Why? Because Turkey Easy is made from leftover turkey roast, rice, almonds, hardcooked eggs, pimiento, cream of chicken soup - doesn't it sound good?

Remember when chicken was served only for company or on Sunday? Now it's the easy on the budget meat. The same thing is happening to turkey. This year, twice as many turkeys will be processed into roasts, slices and other prepared products. It's available all year and is reasonable and convenient. The turkey roast, for instance, weighs two and a half pounds and comes in a foil roasting pan with giblets and a grains of gravy packet included.

This all meat roast is, of course, much smaller in size than a regular bone-in roast, so you and the family will have to get used to that. Even so, you'll be pleasantly surprised to learn that a two-and-a-half pound roast will yield seven servings of four ounces each.

That's quite a lot of meat and will generally provide leftovers, or even a take-your-shoes-off party.

Turkey Easy
1-1/2 cups diced, cooked boneless turkey roast
1 cup cooked white rice
2 hard cooked eggs, chopped
1/4 cup sliced almonds
1-2/3 tablespoons (2 oz. jar) pimiento, drained and chopped
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
dash white pepper
1 can (10-1/2 oz.) cream of chicken

soup
1/3 cup milk
paprika (optional)
Heat oven to moderate (350 degree F.) Butter four (10 oz.) baking dishes. Combine turkey, rice, eggs, almonds, pimiento, mustard and pepper. Mix together soup and milk. Add 1/2 cup to turkey mixture. Pour into baking dishes. Allow about 3/4 cup mixture for each. Spread remaining soup on top. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake 25-30 minutes or until hot and bubbly. Yield: 4 servings.

New Center Is Approved By EATI Board

The request for the establishment of a health occupation training center at the Essex Agricultural and Technical Institute by the Essex County Associated Boards of Trade has been approved by the board of trustees.

A bill for legislative action in 1968 has been filed by Senator William X. Wall of Lawrence. It would provide an addition of 3,600 square feet of new construction and necessary alterations to make Maude Hall a suitable place for conducting expanded programs in health occupations.

The total available area of approximately 11,000 square feet would provide excellent space allocations for the following proposed health occupation programs: surgical technician, inhalation therapist, medical laboratory assistant, medical electronic assistant, ward clerk, physical therapy and occupational assistants, and dental assistant. The 15-month training program for practical nursing has been in effect at the Institute since 1961, and would be included in the Maude Hall facility.

In presenting the Associated Boards of Trade request Dr. Dennis L. Lamy stated that the greatest manpower shortage in the entire nation, Essex County included, is in the field of health services.

The greatest of faults is to be conscious of none.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED...

The "good old days" in the old butcher shop really weren't so good at all. As long as the supply of fly paper held out, you could get through without carrying a fly swatter in one hand. Progress demanded the sanitary packaging used today, just as progress demanded a time saving, efficient system of real estate selling such as now offered by Greater Lawrence Multiple Listing Service. You will do better if you deal through a Multi-List member.

NEW ON THE FORCE — Being sworn as patrolmen for the Andover Police Department are Ronald W. Haggerty, John K. Lynch, David R. Grant, Gordon E. Douglass, Lloyd W. Belbin and Richard W. Enos. Enos and Haggerty are now attending a training school run by the Somerville Police Department. The other men have already complied with regulations on training by attending Northern Essex Police School in Lowell.

School Board Sets Limit On Teacher Coaching Loads

The School Committee made a policy decision Tuesday night against further hiring of department heads, or those in administrative positions as coaches. The motion introduced by Dr. Richard Katz, was passed 4-1, with Committeeman William Doherty abstaining. Dr. Katz and the committee emphasized that they did not intend to ask department heads who are already coaching to get out of coaching, but the committee instructed Committeeman Fred Fitzgerald to convey to the athletic director and discuss with these men their phasing down from full-time coaching over a period of the next couple of years.

In what seemed an about-face, the Committee then approved the appointment of Richard Neal, assistant junior high principal and Gerald Silverman, new head of the history department in the West Junior High, as junior high coaches. But these appointments were pointedly separated from other coaching appointments approved at the same session and were made for one season only, to avoid cancellation of the sport involved.

The policy decision resolved the issue raised at previous meetings of whether department heads who are paid extra to spend time in development of curriculum and other departmental duties should commit time to major coaching duties. The School Committee's recommendations to the athletic director and the department heads now coaching was in line with a recommendation from Supt. Edward I. Erickson.

May the magic of Christmas fill your heart with serenity and happiness. May your holidays be joyful and your New Year rewarding.
